

Ambrovit is now one of the most important Italian and European companies in the sector of fixing systems.

With more than 22 years of experience in a fast-expanding market such as that of fastening system, this Garlasco-based company looks to the future with a constant series of innovations.

Thanks to a recently renovated logistics and storage warehouse, Ambrovit is able to store up to 44,000 pallets and manage 5,000 withdrawal lines a day.

These numbers allow the company to have in stock all the products requested by customers, with delivery within 24/48 hours.

The quality control is another strong point: when it's possible, the products are equipped with CE marking, DoP and UNI, DIN and ISO certifications.

The GOST R certification allows Ambrovit a substantial presence on the Russian market, and the recent transition to zinc-trivalent chrome plating, with consequent depletion of hexavalent chromium products, reflects Ambrovit's commitment to respect the environment and the European RoHS Directive RoHS on harmful substances.

Starting from 2016, Ambrovit has obtained the ETA (European Technical Assessment) certification for all carpentry screws, a document that provides information on the performance of a construction product.

The market of screws, bolts and fastening systems continues to grow, with a rate of around 6%. A growth that has been constant since 2010 and that qualifies Italy as one of the leaders of this sector, immediately after Germany.

In particular, Ambrovit supplies 54 foreign countries, serving customers throughout Europe, thanks to an international sales office who is able to speak 6 foreign languages and who is always available to accommodate customer needs.

The company meets 2019 challenge with an updated and expanded paper and electronic catalogue with 12,000 items ready to be delivered.

Among the most significant recent innovations we note the expansion of the family of concrete screws and rivets.

The new year has also led to an expansion of the packaging: a greater number of packages are now available for customers, to satisfy the widest possible range of orders, with an eye on reduced package size.
